

For women , who generally

earn less than men

and who societies

expect to provide more

unpaid care work ,

it makes rational

sense in economies

with few social

safety nets to embrace